BALTIMORE FIREMEN HONOR TRADE MEN

The departure of the Three Rivers, the steamer chartered by the Retail Merchants' Association to bear 113 business men of Washington down the Chesapeake Bay and up the Potomac River back to Washington, was officially recognized and celebrated by Baltimore authorities last night when two fireboats, the most powerful in the city's service, steamed out and accompanied them from the wharf, while their hose and apparatus was going full blast.

The demonstration of the fireboats was obtained through the efforts of Fire Chief Frank Wagner, of the Washington department, who conferred with the Baltimore chief.

The merchants left yesterday afternoon for Baltimore, after apgrading through the down town business section. Thirty-five automobiles carried the 113 men in the parade, stopping at the Union station. All the merchants wore white duck caps. Each one was labelled with a tag reading:

"Let's get acquainted. My name is—, what is yours. The 1915 outing of the Retail Merchants' Association."

Two big banners, thirty-five feet long, bearing the words: "Buy in an boost for Washington, your logical place. The Retail Merchants' Association," were slung alongside the steamer for its voyage down the bay and up the river.

The Second District National Guard band, of ten pieces, accompanied the merchants on the trip.

The business men are scheduled to return to Washington Monday morning, in time to begin the day's work.
